350 hours of handwork, made in Germany A labour of love by individualists

Handwork

Individuality is a feeling. And a whole lot of handwork. Specialists spend about 350 hours on every sports car to make each Wiesmann one of a kind. Perhaps just as unique is the production level, which in this form can only be found with a real manufacturer. Our sports car is powered by BMW and this is just about where the external input stops.

Sparks fly at the mechanic. The glass fibre reinforced composite materials are handled manually at the metal works, Vast amounts of cable harnesses are compiled individually for each car by hand, in the tannery next door there are the patterns for the interiors and on the production line our staff provide that which technology cannot: heart and soul. For their Wiesmann
